Hart @ Home recognizes that families may not evenly distribute students' work assignments over weekdays. However, due to strict State Law Requirements for school attendance, Hart @ Home expects each student to be engaged in an educational activity required of them in the assignments on each weekday that Hart @ Home is in session, and asks that this "daily engagement" be documented on a daily basis on this sheet by the parent/guardian. This should not be read to prohibit schoolwork on weekends and should not be read to dictate the manner in which a family distributes the assignments over the independent study period. Hart @ Home recognizes that families may not evenly distribute students' work assignments over weekdays. However, due to strict State Law Requirements for school attendance, Hart @ Home expects each student to be engaged in an educational activity required of them in the assignments on each weekday that Hart @ Home is in session, and asks that this "daily engagement" be documented on a daily basis on this sheet by the parent/guardian. This should not be read to prohibit schoolwork on weekends and should not be read to dictate the manner in which a family distributes the assignments over the independent study period. Hart @ Home asks that a parent/guardian documents any "daily engagement" on a day where a student did engaged in educational activities required of them by the assignments. Work done on weekends or other days when school is not in session can be used to "make-up" weekdays where no "daily engagement" occurred.
